National Public Lands Day

Our state's scenic landscapes have always been a source of pride and pleasure. From mountain trails in the High Sierra to a coastline that has captured the hearts of millions, Californians benefit from unparalleled opportunities to enjoy some of the world's most beloved and spectacular public lands.

National Public Lands Day is the nation's largest, single-day volunteer effort for public lands and is coordinated by the National Environmental Education Foundation.

Today, I invite all Californians to experience some small piece of the varied and magnificent land of California. I would also ask that you join many local, state, and federal land management agencies in a day of service to restore and enhance public lands.

Sincerely,

EDMUND G. BROWN JR.
